VANK

VANK_MONT is a system of armchairs and sofas that provides a nice retreat from the usual buzz of offices, hotels, or other public spaces. The partially-enclosed seats allow you to create personal space for relaxation, waiting, or discussing shared visions in groups of various sizes. The modularity offers a broad range of arrangement options to ensure appropriate distancing.

Design: Radek Nowakowski

The high backs of these furniture pieces provide privacy and sound protection. The left or right side of the armchair can remain open, enabling free communication with the surrounding environment. Armchairs can be arranged individually or combined modularly within a building. The MONT collection was also designed to create seating islands with double or triple seats facing each other.

To minimize the use of petroleum-based raw materials like polyurethane foam, filling made from production residues has been applied. The post-industrial foam offers equally good performance properties but with a significantly lower carbon footprint compared to new raw material.

VANK_MONT armchairs are ultra-agile and allow for quick rearrangements thanks to their wheeled base. Agile interior equipment is both functional and eco-friendly. The readiness for change enables adapting to evolving user needs while reducing waste.

Project includes an upholstered cushion that provides lumbar support. It also gives the possibility of fixing to one side a side table made of plywood in white or graphite laminate.

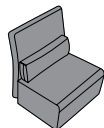

While waiting for a meeting or during work, users can charge their phones or laptops using the mediaport located on the front wall of the seat. For island setups, seating can be combined with additional panels.
